Inzá, Cauca

Regional Specialty Coffee

Region

Situated 91 km from the capital of the department of Cauca, Popayán, lies Inzá, a municipality located within the mountains that make up the central Andean mountain range. A mystical region where a large amount of archeological wealth has been found, it forms part of the Tierradentro national park, one of the three most important archeological sites in Colombia.

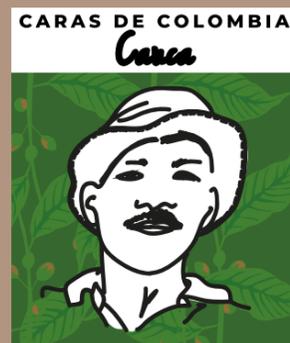

The wealth and biodiversity of the zone are reflected in agricultural products, with coffee and other exotic plants that are in growth, such as tree tomato, being of particular significance. Among the farmers who work the land, there are indigenous tribes such as the Paeces.
